

Indian Institute for Human Settlements

Announces a Short-Course on

Re-Imagining the 'World-Class' City

Bangalore, 14th to 18th June 2011

Following the success of the Institute in January 2011, IHS re-announces a 5-day Short-Course on Re-Imagining the 'World-Class' City. Bringing together an inter-disciplinary Indian and international faculty of academics and practitioners, the short-course will enable participants to engage with the political, economic, ecological, infrastructural, social and institutional challenges of the 'World-Class' City. Through an engagement with real sites and problems, participants will re-imagine what globalising Indian cities and regions could develop into over the next decade and ask what it will take to get there.

Eligibility | Application is open to candidates from all disciplines while individuals with backgrounds in architecture, planning, engineering, economics, finance, sociology, anthropology, geography, political science, environmental sciences, social work, law and management are encouraged to apply. It is open to young professionals with not more than 4-5 years experience in related fields. Students currently pursuing their undergraduate or postgraduate degrees from relevant fields can also apply.

Charges | ₹ 15,500. Need-based limited partial funding upto ₹ 5000 is available for those currently pursuing undergraduate or postgraduate degrees. Candidates can avail of residential facilities, if needed, at additional cost.

Deadline for applications | 25th May, 2011
