Background

The Indian Meteorological Society (IMS) was formed in 1956 during one of the sessions of Indian Science Congress in Kolkata. The Society aims at working towards advancement of meteorological and allied sciences in all their aspects. Dissemination of knowledge of such sciences among the scientific workers and the public and application of meteorology and allied sciences is another set of its activities. Regular lectures, meetings, and symposia are arranged to promote cooperation in scientific work and to foster common interests in the field of meteorology.

Meteorology contributes immensely to the safety of life and property, protection of the environment and, thus, for the socio-economic development of the nations. Hence, "Meteorology for Socio-economic Development" has been chosen as the special theme for TROPMET-2011.

About Hyderabad

Hyderabad, the capital of Andhra Pradesh, is often called the North of South India and the South of North India, and the city reflects the vibrant culture of both these Indias! Hyderabad has a glorious history of over 400 years. When you arrive in December, the day temperatures could be around 28 degrees celsius and the nights around 14 degrees celsius.
