Job Announcement – Network Communications Manager

INREM Foundation is an institution working on societal issues concerning water, public health, agriculture and environment. In recent times INREM has been working extensively on the issue of mitigating fluorosis which happens with excessive intake of fluoride in the body, generally through water, but also through food. Since fluorosis is aggravated by malnutrition, it becomes a difficult problem to address in many parts of India. One way ahead to address this complex problem is by harnessing the strength of a wide network of people to work on this issue. We call this initiative, the “Fluoride Knowledge and Action Network”.

Job Description: We are looking for a Network Communications Manager for the Fluoride Knowledge and Action Network. The job involves contribution towards formation and development of the Fluoride network which will bring together professionals, communities and policy makers across India. The person we are looking for is required to assist in the overall communication strategy centered on both online web-based and extensive direct communication based networking.

Location: Anand, Gujarat

Contract Period: 3 years starting from June 2013 (6 months confirmation period). Potential for extension beyond this period

Primary role: The person will be reporting to the Network Coordinator and working along with the Secretariat team of INREM Foundation. S/he will be responsible towards engaging the network forum and be the contact point between network partners and coordination team. The job also involves collection/development of information with regards to fluorosis mitigation and conversion of documents into web-based communication outputs.

Qualifications: Post-graduate in Development studies /Social Work/Developmental Communication/Social Communication / Rural Management/Journalism/Mass Communication

Experience: Candidates of experience with 2-5 years will be preferred. Especially, we are looking for candidates with rural communication experience and/or professional networking experience around social causes. Exceptional fresh candidates with the requisite maturity and sensitivity will also be considered.

Skills and Knowledge: The person should have good interpersonal skills, ability to convert complex ideas into simple communication outputs and be interested in travelling extensively within India. Proficiency in English/Hindi is essential. Computer based skills such as Word Processor, Spreadsheet and Internet are necessary.

Compensation: INR 4,80,000 per annum (all inclusive)
